Trade Adjustment Assistance as expanded by the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009

The Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) program was created to provide benefits and support to workers who become unemployed due to the impact of international trade. The TAA program seeks to provide U.S. workers who are adversely affected by trade with the opportunity to obtain the skills, resources, and support they need to become reemployed. An adverse effect includes a job loss or threat of job loss.

The first step to receiving TAA benefits and services is to submit a petition to the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL). Petitions may be submitted by:

- Three or more workers in the same firm or subdivision;
- The workers' employer;
- A union official or other duly authorized representative of such workers; or
- One-Stop operators or partners (including state workforce agencies and dislocated worker units).

A petition identifies a worker group at a specific firm or subdivision and covers all individuals in that group. Generally, if a worker is laid off, a petition must be submitted within one year of the layoff for that worker to be covered by the petition.

Upon receiving a petition, DOL immediately begins an investigation to determine whether the circumstances of the layoff meet the group eligibility criteria established by the Trade Act of 1974, as amended. The Department may contact customers and suppliers of the company, and others, in order to determine whether the criteria below are met.

You may be eligible for TAA if your job is lost or threatened due to trade-related circumstances such as:

- · Increased imports of either articles or services;
- A shift in production to or an acquisition of services or articles from any foreign country by your company;
- An acquisition of services from any foreign country by your public agency employer;
- Your employer's loss of business from a customer with TAA-certified workers; or
- Your employer is identified as trade-injured by the International Trade Commission.

After investigating the petition, DOL certifies or denies group eligibility to apply for TAA. Workers in a certified group then apply individually for benefits and services through their local One-Stop Career Center.
